Pam Lassiter connects people with meaningful work. Author of The New Job Security, a Wall Street Journal award winning book, she is principal of Lassiter Consulting, a firm that provides career transition programs and coaching to companies and individuals worldwide. As a consultant in career management for over thirty years, Lassiter works with senior level professionals who are developing satisfying work, either in their current company, during a career transition, or in starting an entrepreneurial venture.

Lassiter teaches "Career Leadership" at Harvard University's Division of Continuing Education and coaches senior professionals in her private, global practice. She is a coach for Harvard Business School Executive Education and has taught in their course for women re-entering the workforce since its inception. Her clients include professionals who want private, discreet coaching as well as Fortune 100 companies, startups, and multiple graduate business programs including MIT, Princeton, and University of California Berkeley-Haas. Through leading ExecuNet in New England, Lassiter has helped thousands of professionals to improve their career management, networking and negotiation skills.

Her client companies include Vertex, Agfa, Gillette, BlueCross BlueShield, ITT, Harvard University, Getronics, First Data, Polaroid, Roche, Barclays Bank and others in the manufacturing, financial and high tech fields. She sponsors career events for the HBS Alumni Association of Boston's mid-career professionals who are actively managing their careers.

Lassiter earned her undergraduate degree from the University of Texas in English/Spanish and her Master's degree from Boston University in psychological counseling with specific graduate coursework in career development and business management. She serves on the Board of the Museum of Science in Boston and works with the Corporate Board Committee of the Boston Club to coach nominees to obtain seats on publicly held boards.
